For as in the days before the flood, they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noah entered the ark, and did not know until the flood came and took them all away, so also will the coming of the Son of Man be.

A close-up, high-angle shot of an antique clock face. The clock is made of a dark, possibly black or dark brown, material with a textured surface. The hour markers are Roman numerals, with some appearing as simple lines and others as more complex, stylized shapes. The hands of the clock are dark and have a classic, ornate design. A shadow of the hands is cast onto the clock face, creating a sense of depth and movement. The lighting is dramatic, with strong highlights and deep shadows, giving the scene a mysterious and aged atmosphere. The text "The Time Is At Hand" is superimposed on the right side of the clock face, with two empty rectangular boxes above and below it, suggesting a missing or obscured part of the text.
